Israel Passes 4 Million Vaccinated

TEL AVIV Feb 16th — Israel crossed another major milestone in its warp-speed vaccination campaign officially administering the 4 millionth inoculation in a country with 9.3 million citizens.

That is two-thirds of Israel's eligible citizens who have received the first of two shots.

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Health Minister Yuli Edelstein were present for the symbolic shot.

Also symbolically, Netanyahu has 4 million under his thumb.

"I would like to appeal from here to the 570,000 people over 50 who have yet to be vaccinated. Almost 100% of the deaths and severe cases are concentrated in this group," Netanyahu said in a push to get that age group fully vaccinated.

He called the "small jab ... insignificant" with few side effects except for "a few hours' discomfort."

This comes as the government has voted for implementation of the "Green Badge" (previously called the green passport) which will bar those who are not vaccinated from houses of worship, gyms and studios, cultural and sports events, hotels and swimming pools...

Despite the hailed success of the vaccination campaign, the cabinet also voted on restrictions for the Purim holiday including caps on gatherings, a ban on parades and parties and holiday meals with nuclear families only.

The sanctions being placed on those who choose not to be inoculated — including threats of losing their jobs — has pushed some citizens to the streets in protest.

Thousands Protest Perceived Coerced Vaccination

An estimated 2,000 to 3,000 citizens gathered in Bima Square in Tel Aviv on Monday night for a demonstration organized by a team of lawyers, doctors, scientists and teachers who are concerned with the government's coercive measures.

"We will continue to fight to unseal the 30-year confidentiality agreement placed on the coronavirus discussions, to prevent coercion and to protect human rights," protest organizers said referring to a decision by the government to conceal official government discussions on COVID until 2050.

“Non-transparency, sanctions and coercion only crush the public's trust, divide the people and prevent the exit of the crisis.”

“Israel is the only country in the world that dares to talk about a green passport,” they continued.

Several Israeli protestors wore yellow stars, labelled “UNVACCONATED” (in Hebrew) drawing a parallel to the symbols of Jews during the Holocaust.

“What's going on right now in this country is a direct comparison to the Holocaust. They want to split the people into two sections: the vaccinated and the non-vaccinated,” Aleksei Fullman told ALL ISRAEL NEWS. “That is exactly what was happening in the 1930s. They wanted to justify their ban on Jews by making a law - first they banned them from work, then from going to certain places, and then everything went downhill.”

Sarah Smolyov, who traveled from Haifa for the protest, said she sees the requirements as a slippery slope of stripping her rights.

“If you don't vaccinate you can't shop, you can't fly overseas,” she said. “I'm an innocent person but they are making me feel guilty and I don't know what I did wrong.”

Another area of concern is an amendment being pushed to change medical privacy laws to allow the names of those who have not been vaccinated to be made public.

“The purpose of the proposed law is to amend the Public Health Ordinance, 1940, to enable the provision of information on vaccinators to local authorities and the Ministry of Education to assist the Ministry of Health, in promoting the national vaccination campaign, encourage the public to get vaccinated, and help those in need to get vaccinated, receive information from various public bodies to assist in promoting the national immunization campaign and issuing vaccination certificates,” the amendment reads.

Alongside the proposed legal measures, a number of other carrots have been dangled before hesitant citizens to encourage them to get vaccinated including free food and discounts on property taxes.

Meanwhile, Netanyahu told Israeli media in an interview on Monday that he is negotiating with both Pfizer and Moderna for additional tens of millions of vaccines in the years ahead plus opening plants in Israel.

THE ISRAELI GREEN PASS SYSTEM HAS GONE INTO EFFECT.

All Israel News Staff | February 24, 2021

Israeli health officials have said that individuals who seek to forge green passports risk facing jail time.

Israel's Health Ministry rolled out its "green passport" program requiring that citizens show their green badge in order to enter places such as registered gyms, swimming pools, hotels, theaters, places of worship and concerts. Restaurants and bars are expected to join the program in March.

Israeli Health Minister Yuli Edelstein presented the green passport program as a dramatic return to life prior to the pandemic.

"We are giving a huge line to vaccinators. This is the first step back to an almost normal life," said Edelstein last Thursday during an extensive briefing on the new green passport program.

Only individuals who are at least a week past their second vaccination or have recovered from COVID-19 will be eligible for the program. This includes around 740,000 people who have recovered from the virus and are currently not eligible for the vaccination.

Eligible individuals can download their green passport via the Health Ministry's traffic light website or through a smartphone application. The passport will be valid for six months from the first week after the second vaccination. Stores or other places of business connected to the green program will ask a visitor to present his or her green passport for scanning and ID card before entering the venue.

In another move toward normalcy, the Israeli airline company Israir announced on Sunday that it is relaunching domestic flights between Ben-Gurion Airport and Eilat for green passport holders starting on Feb. 23. This pilot program will also be available for people who have recovered from the coronavirus.

In parallel with rolling out new green passport system, Israel's world-leading vaccination campaign continues at a breakneck pace. On Tuesday, Israel's Health Ministry announced that more than 70% of Israelis above the age of 16 have received at least one dose of the COVID-19 vaccine. More than 3 million Israelis have already received both doses of the vaccine. Overall, some 4.45 million Israelis have received at least one vaccination dose, roughly constituting 50% of Israel's approximately 9 million citizens. Israeli data reportedly shows a very low infection rate among people who have received the COVID-19 vaccine. Only 0.04% caught the virus after receiving their second dose of the vaccine.

While the green passport program has been hailed by many as an important step toward normal life in a safeguarded environment, critics argue that the program risks dividing the society between people the vaccinated and the non-vaccinated.

Edelstein stressed last week that vaccination will not be made mandatory in Israel. "Whoever chooses not to be vaccinated has his right. There will also be no personal sanctions against someone who is not vaccinated," stated Edelstein.

However, with businesses threatening to fire employees, synagogues banning worshippers from services and a new law being considered to reveal vaccination records to municipalities and schools plus a wave of public shaming against the unvaccinated, vaccines are swiftly becoming the only way to stay connected to life in Israel.

Israeli health officials have said that individuals who seek to forge green passports risk facing jail time. "Whoever thinks this is a child's play and get himself a certificate despite not getting vaccinated will be caught and will end up in jail," said Edelstein.

Israel's Timeline for Return to Normal is Vaccination Based!

Netanyahu said; "Our intention is to finish vaccinating the entire population [who are] over 16" and... in April... reach a full opening."

... With God's help and yours, we will get through Purim in peace so that we will be able to celebrate Passover together," he said.

Netanyahu used the 'fake news' label to discredit reports about the dangers of the mRNA vaccine, which has never been used before on humans and is only approved for emergency use by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Considering COVID-19 has an average death rate in Israel of 0.7% of those infected; one could ask, is there an emergency or another agenda? Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu ended his news conference Wednesday, with a cynical and bizarre twist on the biblical Passover holiday,

"This Passover we will again ask – why is this night different? And this time we will answer – this night we are all vaccinated," the prime minister concluded. In the traditional Passover Seder, observers ask "why is this night different from all the others?" as participants remember God's deliverance of the Israelites from slavery in Egypt.

Health Ministry head of public health, Sharon Alroy-Preis, dismissed Netanyahu's plans. "I can't sign off on reopening in two weeks, or a month. It all depends on the contagion," she told Army Radio. "
