From FDA to MHRA: are drug regulators for hire?

A BMJ investigation by Maryanne Demasi, investigative journalist

Patients and doctors expect drug regulators to provide an unbiased, rigorous assessment of investigational medicines before they hit the market. But do they have sufficient independence from the companies they are meant to regulate?

Maryanne Demasi investigates

Over the past decades, regulatory agencies have seen large proportions of their budgets funded by the industry they are sworn to regulate.

In 1992, the US Congress passed the Prescription Drug User Fee Act (PDUFA), allowing industry to fund the US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) directly through “user fees” intended to support the cost of swiftly reviewing drug applications. With the act, the FDA moved from a fully taxpayer funded entity to one supplemented by industry money. Net PDUFA fees collected have increased 30 fold—from around $29m in 1993 to $884m in 2016.1

In Europe, industry fees funded 20% of the new EU-wide regulator, the European Medicines Agency (EMA), in 1995. By 2010 that had risen to 75%; today it is 89%.2

In 2005 in the UK, the House of Commons' health committee evaluated the influence of the drug industry on health policy, including the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Agency (MHRA).3 The committee was concerned that industry funding could lead the agency to “lose sight of the need to protect and promote public health above all else as it seeks to win fee income from the companies.” But nearly two decades on, little has changed, and industry funding of drug regulators has become the international norm.

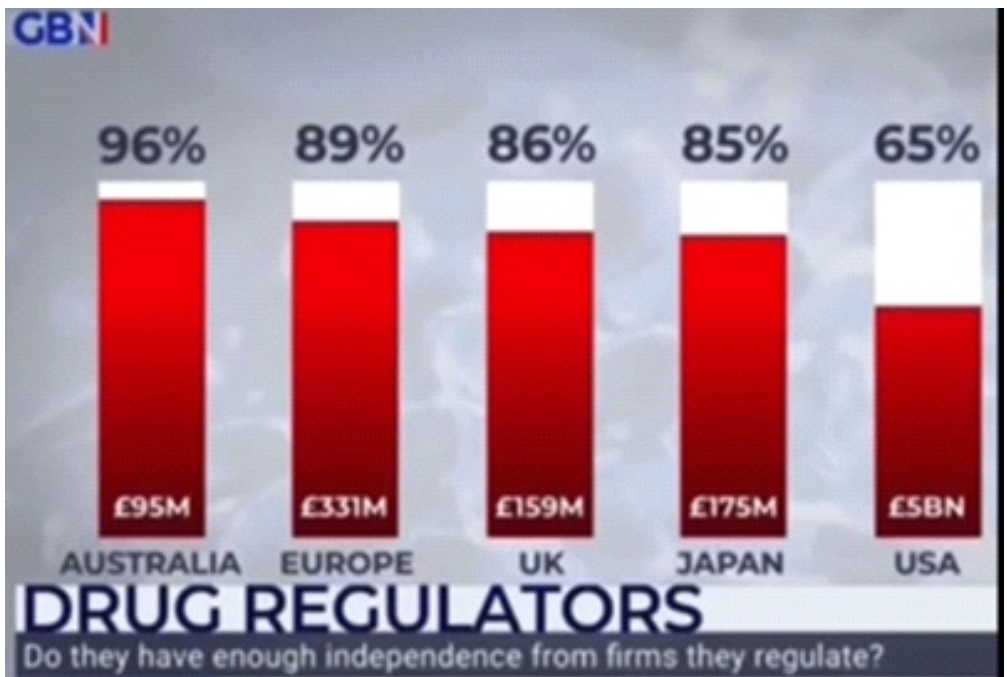

The BMJ asked six leading regulators, in Australia, Canada, Europe, Japan, the UK, and US, a series of questions about their funding, transparency in their decision making (and of data), and the rate at which new drugs are approved. “... that industry funding could lead the agency to “lose sight of the need to protect and promote public health above all else as it seeks to win fee income from the companies.” But nearly two decades on, little has changed, and industry funding drug regulators has become the international norm.

The BMJ asked six leading regulators, in Australia, Canada, Europe, Japan, the UK and the US, a series of questions about their funding transparency in their decisions making (and of data), and the rate at which new drugs are approved. We found the industry money permeates the globe's leading regulators, raising questions about their independence, especially in the wake of a string of drug and device scandals.

Industry fees

Industry money saturates the globe's leading regulator. The BMJ found that the majority of regulators' budget—particularly the portion focused on drugs—in derived from industry fees (table 1).

Of the six regulators, Australia had the highest proportion of budget from industry fees (96%) and in 2020-2021 approved more than nine of every 10 drug company applications. Australia's Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA) firmly denies that its almost exclusive reliance on pharmaceutical industry funding is a conflict of interest (COI). In response to a query the agency said. “All fees and charges are prescribed in our legislation. To provide transparency, the TGA fees and charges are published on the TGA website.”

But for decades academics have raised questions about the influence funding has on regulatory decisions, especially in the wake of a string of drug and device scandals—including opioids, Alzheimer's drugs, influenza antivirals, pelvic mesh, joint prostheses, breast and contraceptive implants, cardiac stents, and pacemakers.^{5 5 6 7} An analysis of three decades of PDUFA in the US has shown how a reliance on industry fees is contributing to a decline in evidentiary standards, ultimately harming patients.⁸ In Australia, experts have called for a complete overhaul of the TGA's structure and function, arguing tht the agency has become too close to industry.

Sociologist Donald Light of Rowan University in New Jersey, US, who has spent decades studying drug regulation, says, “Like the FDA the TGA was founded to be an independent institute. However, being largely funded by fees from the companies whose products is is charged to evaluate is a fundamental conflict of interest and a prime example of institutional corruption.”

Response to the Immediately stop injecting children with COVID-19 vaccinations E-Petition presented to the Queensland Parliament

The following ministerial response has been received by the Queensland Parliament for the “Immediately stop injecting children with COVID-19 vaccinations petition”. In accordance with Standing Rules and Orders your personal information will be deleted.

TO: Mr Neil Laurie, Clerk of the Parliament, Queensland Parliament /
George Street, BRISBANE QLD 4000

Dear Mr Laurie Neil

14 APR 2022

I write in response to your letter regarding petition number 3678-21, tabled in Parliament 15 March in relation to COVID-19 vaccinations for children.

Dr. Robert Malone's views on COVID-19 vaccinations have been widely discredited by the scientific community.

COVID-19 vaccinations are a proven, safe and effective means of reducing both the risk of severe disease and transmission. The Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA) assesses all vaccines in Australia. For a vaccine to be approved, the TGA must assess that it is safe, effective and manufactured to a very high-quality standard.

To ensure quality of vaccinations, the TGA provides ongoing monitoring of the safety of registered vaccinations and ensures an independent quality assessment of every batch of vaccine supplied in Australia.

A paediatric formulation of the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine (Comirnaty) is available for children aged 5 to 11 years old, as recommended by the Australian Technical Advisory Group on Immunisation (ATAGI) and supported by National Cabinet. Recently, the Moderna COVID-19 vaccine has also been approved for children aged 6 to 11 years old. These vaccines have been approved based on the results of clinical trials demonstrating that these vaccines are highly effective and that most side effects are mild and transient.

Detailed information about the paediatric formulation of the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine and Moderna COVID-19 vaccine is published on the Australian Technical Advisory Group on Immunisation (ATAGI) website.

Although most children will only experience mild illness if they contract COVID-19, some will experience more serious symptoms. Recent data estimates 1% of children with the Omicron variant require admission to hospital. In Australia, approximately 1 in 100,000 children infected with COVID-19 have died. Vaccinations remain the most effective tool available to prevent infection and severe illness in children and adults.

Vaccinating children also reduces the risk that they will become infected and spread COVID-19 to family members, friends and others around them. This minimises disruptions to education, extracurricular and social activities, which can impact the wellbeing of children and their families.

I trust this information is of assistance to the petitioners.

Yours sincerely

Yvette D'Ath
