Re: last weeks article titled...
"Why it's YEHovah, but HalleluYAH"

<https://youtu.be/OS4knZ5v84M>

From the 2:00 mark in the linked video (above) Nehemia Gordon stated, as part of his explanation about why the "ho" was dropped from a long list of original names including Yehonatan and Yehoshua, that:

"They dropped the H because of what's happening in Greek; Greek doesn't have an H"

Special thanks to Harry Poulos who emailed us to advise the following.

"He has it wrong about there being no 'H' in the Greek language. It is the 22nd letter of the alphabet, and it looks like an elongated x, and its capital is like a capital X, and it is pronounced as H.

For example, the Greek word for 'thankyou' is ευχαριστω."

RELIGION BILL MUCH IMPROVED, BUT LITTLE CERTAINTY FOR FUTURE FOLAUS

ACL.org.au | Dan Flynn | Dec 10, 2019
<https://tinyurl.com/qp6mhc>

The Australian Christian Lobby has welcomed key changes to the Federal Government's second draft of the Religious Discrimination Bill 2019 released today, whilst expressing concern that individuals of faith or 'future Folaus' may not be fully protected from workplace discrimination. "On the one hand the bill contains some meaningful improvements, but on the other hand, some obvious gaps still remain," said ACL spokesperson, Dan Flynn.

"Importantly, the Bill now says that a person from the same faith - not judges - will determine religious doctrine in religious discrimination cases. It also makes sense that religious charities will now be able to prefer persons of the same religion and that religious hospitals, aged care and accommodation providers will be able to make staffing decisions based on faith," said Mr Flynn, "However, we expected crucial changes to protect individual people of faith, particularly in the workplace. These changes are not in the new draft released today."

"A large employer can still limit an employee's statements of belief outside the workplace if the employer successfully claims it is necessary to avoid unjustifiable financial hardship," Mr Flynn observed, "This clause will empower activists to stage boycotts and negative publicity campaigns against sponsors, suppliers or customers, to pressure them to fire people of faith."

"Everyday Australians are unlikely to afford a legal battle with a large company, effectively imposing limitations on their speech," Mr Flynn warned, "ACL supports and hears from many people marginalised and disciplined for their statements of faith at work, in university and in their professions."

"The Government as better protected some individuals from discrimination with a new 'qualifying body conduct rule'," Mr Flynn further noted, "This prevents professional, trade or occupational bodies stopping a person making a statement of belief unless that restriction is essential to that profession, trade or occupation. This excellent principle should also apply to employers to ensure that statements of religious belief are only restricted where it is essential to the performance of that employee's work duties."

"The ACL will continue to engage with the Government, Opposition and cross-benchers to achieve a Religious Discrimination Act that provides real protection for people of faith." Mr Flynn concluded.

Israel forced to hold 3rd round of elections

Joel C. Rosenberg, Dec 12th 2019

<https://tinyurl.com/waa2k93>

Here's why:

- Benjamin "Bibi" Netanyahu — Israel's longest serving Prime Minister — is losing his political hold on the country.
- Twice this year, Bibi has failed to secure enough seats for his Likud Party and his center-right allies to form a governing coalition.
- After Bibi failed the second time, Bibi's main opposition party challenger — former IDF chief of staff Benny Gantz — was given the opportunity to form a governing coalition, after Bibi failed. However, Gantz failed, as well.
- Meanwhile, Israel's Attorney General recently indicted

Netanyahu in three separate cases involving alleged bribery, fraud and breach of trust.

- Polls show that Israelis overwhelmingly want two things.
- First, they want Netanyahu to step down to focus on his legal troubles, not serve as PM will under indictment.
- Second, they want the two major parties — Likud and Gantz's Blue & White party — to form a national unity government in which Gantz would serve as PM for two years and then rotate to the head of Likud being PM for two years.
- Bibi, as you can imagine, doesn't want to step aside.
- But Gantz refuses to create a deal with Bibi while Bibi is under indictment.

Now, enter a new dynamic: Bibi suddenly has a serious new challenger within Likud.

- Gideon Sa'ar, one of Likud's most popular and effective Members of Knesset who has served as Education Minister and the Interior Minister, has called for snap leadership primaries.
- But shrewdly, Sa'ar is not focusing on Bibi's legal troubles.
- Rather, he is making the case to fellow Likudniks that Bibi needs to be replaced because he has lost two elections in a row, has failed to form a governing coalition two times in a row, and has no better prospects of winning an election and creating such a coalition via a third election.

- Indeed, Sa'ar is arguing that Likud could get shellacked in March, punished by voters for driving the nation to a third election.

It's too early to say whether Likud party members are ready to say goodbye to Bibi. However, here are two last things you should know.

- First, it appears that Likud is going to have a leadership primary on December 26. Bibi's allies are understandably trying to scuttle that. But if the primary does happen, we'll know very soon whether Bibi will lead Likud going forward, or whether Sa'ar (or someone else) will emerge on top
- Second, a new poll does, in fact, suggest that in the next election, public support for Likud may drop significantly, and support for Gantz's party could surge. "According to Channel 13, if the election were held today, Blue & White...would win 37 seats, compared to 33 for the Likud."
- Watch for a rash of more polls to come out in the coming days.
